The definition of a game used the term pretended reality rather than magic circle because the former is self-explanatory and the latter is not. However, from now on, we'll refer to the magic circle because it is the more widely accepted term.

In single-player games, the player establishes the magic circle simply by choosing to play. In multiplayer games, players agree upon a convention, which in turn establishes the magic circle. In other words, they all pretend together, and more important, they all agree to pretend the same things—that is, to accept the same rules (see Figure 1.2). Although the pretended reality can seem very real to a deeply immersed player, it is still only a convention and can be renounced by the player refusing to play.
