Seriously, don't copy the following code snippet and paste it into your terminal. Above tutorial also explains how to create app in facebook developer console through video. Never, ever copy and paste code from the internet you don't understand. Update the question so it's on-topic for Meta Stack Exchange. You will be able to get first name, last name, email, gender, facebook id and birth date from facebook. So the lesson here? Closed. Want to improve this question? It is not currently accepting answers. You have to come up with the same conclusion using different words, otherwise you risk getting busted. A screenshot from the latest version of the Nissan ConnectEV app... And trust me, we all do it. Since I have registered with Facebook this means I am unable to use the app. A developer working on the NissanConnect EV mobile app just got caught red-handed when a verbatim Stack Overflow answer showed up in the most recent app update. Tutorial I followed is : Facebook login integration android studio. I have tried reinstalling the Facebook app but this has not helped. This question is off-topic. I repeat: never copy and paste code from the internet you don't understand. I am solely registered via Facebook and I am trying to login to the Stack Overflow app but the option to login to Facebook does not appear: My problem is almost identical to that posted here: Login with Facebook using Stack Exchange Android App except that I do have the Facebook app installed and logged into. Closed 4 years ago. pic.twitter.com/Tseyvwyg3R — Scott Helme (@Scott_Helme) May 4, 2016 But the fact that a line of code copied from the internet somehow made its way through the quality assurance process (there is a QA process for Nissan apps, right?) and deployed as an update — to an app that manages a car nevertheless — doesn't give me a ton of confidence to Nissan or other connected cars in general. 8 Copying and pasting code from the internet is one of the biggest open secrets in computer programming. Anyone who may or may not have copied his best friend's English essay in grade school knows the rule: don't copy word for word.
